. . to put an end to these acts of aggression."⁵ But the fighting, limited as it was, was over as early as 28 August. Churchill referred to it as a "brief and fruitful exercise of overwhelming force against a weak and ancient state. Britain and Russia were fighting for their lives. Inter arma silent leqes."⁶ The occupying Powers compelled the Head of State of Iran, Shah Reza Pahlavi, to abdicate and they installed on the throne his son Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

10. Within the aim of opening "the fullest communication with Russia through Persia," see supra, para. 8, the railway was of utmost importance. Even before the end of hostilities in Iran, Churchill asked Major-General Sir Hastings Ismay, Chief of Staff, for the plans to have "the railway in working order in our hands."⁷ Shortly after the cessation of fighting Churchill telegraphed to General Wavell expressing his interest in the latter's "railway projects, which [were] being sedulously examined here [i.e., in London]."⁸

11. Transport of war supplies to the Soviet Union through Iran had to be settled on a trilateral plane, i.e. between the occupying Powers and Iran. In his messages to Joseph Stalin, Chairman of the Council of People's Commissars of the USSR, Churchill spoke of the motives prompting him to push forward with the signing of a tripartite agreement: "I am most anxious to settle our alliance with Persia and to make an intimate efficient working arrangement with your [i.e., Soviet] forces in Persia"
